House of Blues cancels big show after ODs, one death

EDM concert. A popular EDM musician was performing this week at the music venue on Lansdowne Street.

A 19-year-old New Hampshire woman died early Wednesday, Aug. 28, at House of Blues and two other people were in serious condition after taking an unknown drug at the popular Lansdowne Street venue.

Police were conducting a death investigation at House of Blues, and a second show scheduled for the venue the night of Aug. 28 was canceled.

"In light of [the] tragic events and an active police investigation, [the Aug. 28] performance by Zedd has been canceled," Live Nation said in a statement. House of Blues is a Live Nation venue. "Our thoughts are with the families and friends suffering now. The safety of patrons and fans is top priority and all involved continue to work closely in conjunction with local officials on this active investigation."

The performer at the venue when the New Hampshire woman died was electronic dance music star Zedd, who was scheduled to perform a second, sold-out show the night of Aug. 28. Both shows were listed for ages 18 and older only.

Zedd

"Out of respect to the families and friends involved in [the] tragic loss, the show in Boston [Aug. 28] is canceled," Zedd posted on Twitter. "Love and respect to those in pain right now. Our hearts go out to you. PLEASE, everyone... BE RESPONSIBLE!"

A Boston police spokeswoman said officers received a call for help about 12:42 a.m. on Aug. 28. When officers arrived, they were told three people had been taken to Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center after apparently overdosing on an unknown substance.

The three victims did not know each other, police said.

The woman later died, and another man and woman were in serious condition.

According to the musician's Twitter page, nothing was out of the ordinary at the Aug. 27 show.

"Sorry about all the RT's... I'm still buzzing!.... What a tour opening! OMG!" Zedd tweeted on Aug. 27.

Jay Anderson, a spokesman for House of Blues, said earlier on Aug. 28 that the victims were treated by both Boston EMS and on-site personnel, adding that "the safety of our guests is our top priority."

Fifty years later, Boston bells toll in honor of MLK's dream

On Wednesday, Aug. 28, a chorus of bells tolled in Washington, D.C., and across the nation in remembrance of civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr.'s "I have a dream" speech. In Boston, Massachusetts Gov. Deval Patrick helped ring the bells at the Old South Meeting House on Washington Street. The event marked the 50th anniversary of the March on Washington for Jobs and Freedom, where King delivered the inspirational speech. / NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

Cops: Woman's claim of assault by driver fake

A woman's claim she was sexually assaulted while trying to hail a taxi near the Cambridge border was fabricated, Boston police said. The attack claim, which followed a similar assault weeks earlier, caused fear and prompted warnings to women to avoid rides from unlicensed cabs. Police said evidence, witness interviews and statements led detectives to determine the woman made up the Aug. 18 attack. Authorities are still searching for a man who picked up a woman in the Seaport District and attacked her. METRO

Fast-food workers plan to walk out

Hundreds of fast-food workers in Boston planned to walk off their jobs Thursday, Aug. 29, as part of the largest-ever strike to hit the $200 billion industry.

According to organizers, low-wage employees at Burger King, Wendy's, Popeyes, McDonald's, Dunkin' Donuts and KFC are calling for $15 an hour, as well as the right to form a union "without retaliation or unfair labor practices."

The walkouts were expected to culminate the afternoon of Aug. 29 with rallies in Copley, Roslindale and Boston Common, organizers said.

The event follows walkouts by fast-food workers in seven other cities.

Douglas Brioso was charged with armed assault to murder and resisting arrest, police said.

'No More Names' makes Boston stop

Gun control. Advocates rallied at Faneuil Hall for "common sense gun laws."

A crowd joined with local leaders at Faneuil Hall on Aug. 28 to urge Congress to support stricter background checks for gun owners. / NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

Mayor Thomas M. Menino and Sen. Elizabeth Warren joined gun control advocates at Faneuil Hall Wednesday, Aug. 28, to mark the Boston stop of "No More Names: National Drive to Reduce Gun Violence."

The 100-day, 25-state national bus tour takes aim at the nation's gun control policies, and calls on lawmakers to support what organizers refer to as "common sense gun policies."

Speakers at the rally urged Congress to take another look at bipartisan background-checks legislation that would help keep guns out of the hands of those with a criminal history or mental illness.

"Too many innocent people have lost their lives to gun violence — not only on our streets and in our neighborhoods, but throughout our country," Menino said.

Kim Odom, whose 13-year-old son Steven was shot and killed in Dorchester in 2007, called for new regulations to protect children.

"After my son was shot to death just blocks away from our home five years ago," she said, "I saw firsthand how gun violence can tear apart families and leave a gaping void in the lives of those it affects."

Sixty miles. Energy Exodus march kicks off

Activists who have been rallying for the closure of a coal plant in Somerset and the development of offshore wind generators on Aug. 28 kicked off a six-day, 60-mile march from Fall River to Hyannis.

"So far, we've had a number of cars honk to show ... support, and a lot of thumbs up. We are definitely expecting a big bump over the weekend, and plan to end very strongly on [Sept. 2]," said Craig Altemose, an Energy Exodus organizer and Somerville resident.

The activists are seeking the closure of Brayton Point, a coal plant with large cooling towers that organizers said is the second largest carbon polluter in the region.

About 80 people had joined the march as of the Aug. 28 kickoff. METRO

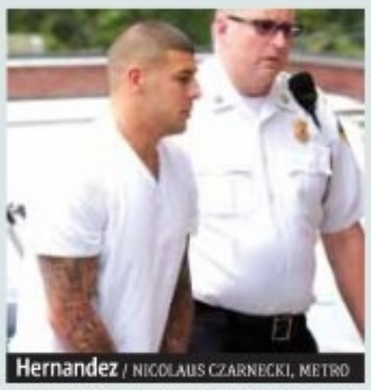
Report: Aaron Hernandez used PCP, was almost cut from Patriots

Former Patriots tight end and accused murderer Aaron Hernandez carried a gun with him at all times, became paranoid and often used angel dust (PCP) to get high, according to a report in Rolling Stone magazine.



Hernandez / NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

The piece speaks on Hernandez's past extensively, showing that his downward spiral may have began when his father, Dennis, died in 2006.

In addition, Rolling Stone says that Patriots head coach Bill Belichick actually threatened to trade or release Hernandez in March after the tight end was involved in an alleged domestic incident. The piece goes on to say that Belichick told Hernandez that he should be discreet and that it was a good idea to "rent a safe house."

Prosecutors say that Hernandez orchestrated the fatal shooting of Odin Lloyd near Hernandez's North Attleboro home on June 17.

Flames continue. Fires rage on in Somerville as arson probe continues

Investigators search for clues into an early morning suspicious fire on Summer Street in Somerville on Wednesday. / NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

Arson investigation

City officials said earlier this month that at least three in a recent string of nearly a dozen fires were intentionally set. The arson string pushed officials to offer a $15,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and prosecution of the person or people involved with setting the fires.

Investigators on Wednesday morning were at the scenes of two separate fires in Somerville, which is experiencing a string of arsons.

Everyone made it out of the buildings that were damaged as a result of the dual two-alarm fires that broke out at 85 Bromfield Road and 313 Summer St. However, two firefighters suffered minor injuries, said Chief Kevin Kelleher.

The first fire broke out at 5:28 a.m. at Bromfield Road and damaged the home there. Moments later, fire crews were called to Summer Street, where a car and the side of a home were also damaged by the blaze. Investigators were determining the cause.

Earlier this month, officials said three recent fires in the city were intentionally set.

"Obviously, it's somebody that needs help. Maybe they don't want to hurt somebody, but if somebody is setting fires, eventually they will hurt somebody," Kelleher said.

Anyone with information can call 617-625-1600 or contact the state arson hot line at 800-682-9229.

Administration.
Syria options include multi-day strikes

The Obama administration is considering military options that include multi-day strikes on Syrian government targets in response to last week's chemical weapons attack, a senior U.S. official said on Wednesday, Aug. 28.

"The options are not limited to just one day," the official said, speaking on condition of anonymity, as the prospects for a U.S.-led air and missile assault on Syria looked all but certain.

Though the White House said President Barack Obama had yet to make a final decision on exactly how to respond, U.S. security officials have said that any air campaign would likely involve cruise missiles fired from U.S. warships in the Mediterranean.

But the United States does not intend to act unilaterally should it choose to go forward with military action, the senior official said. REUTERS

THE TWERK'S ON US

Here is what will shock me: If we ever make it through another awards show without something "shocking" happening. I put that word in quotes because even though the Twitterverse went agog, I didn't even raise an eyebrow over Miley Cyrus' tongue-wagging, booty-shaking antics at the Video Music Awards. Why? I've seen this act before. Michael Jackson did it. So did his sister. So did Madonna, Prince, Ozzy Osbourne and a whole rogue's gallery of entertainers. Doing something that seems outrageous is as much a part of show biz as footlights and grease paint.

In case you missed it (and you should drop to your knees to thank heaven right now if you did) the erstwhile Hannah Montana pranced around surrounded by giant dancing teddy bears (I have no idea why), croaking out a truly dreadful song, while wearing a pair of outfits that … well, let's just say if Victoria wore them she'd have no more secrets. Then she backed her assets up to Robin Thicke and started grinding like a fresh roast coffeemaker.

Miley Cyrus / GETTY IMAGES

Quoted

Every headline screamed about Miley's post-teen twerking as if no one there had contemplated (gasp!) that someone would come out in a skimpy costume and do something outrageous.

Critics roared: It was rude, raunchy, and R-rated!

It was also right on the money. The day after, you could scarcely find a word about anyone's brilliant songs or imaginative videos. Every headline screamed about Miley's post-teen twerking as if no one there had contemplated (gasp!) that someone would come out in a skimpy costume and do something outrageous. Cue the "Casablanca" clip. "I'm shocked, shocked to find that gambling is going on in here!"

In the end it came down to a choice. Before the awards, a lot of Americans probably had only one thought about Miley Cyrus: When is this train wreck going to end? And now, they're asking: What is she going to do next? For any performer, the second question is the one you want on everyone's mind. I'm not saying what she did was good nor that it showcased the best of America. I'm just saying, "You've come a long way, Hannah."

Government delays deadline for health care reform plans

Obama's Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act is expected to extend federally subsidized health coverage to an estimated 7 million uninsured Americans in 2014 through the marketplaces. / GETTY IMAGES

Opposition. GOP and its allies have already fragmented Obamacare's original vision.

The Obama administration has delayed a step crucial to the launch of the new healthcare law, the signing of final agreements with insurance plans to be sold on federal health insurance exchanges starting Oct. 1.

The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services notified insurance companies on Tuesday that it would not sign final agreements with the plans between Sept. 5 and 9, as originally anticipated, but would wait until mid-September instead, according to insurance industry sources.

Nevertheless, Joanne Peters, a spokeswoman for HHS, said the department remains "on track to open" the marketplaces on time on Oct. 1.

The reason for the hold-up was unclear. Sources attributed it to technology problems involving the display of insurance products within the federal information technology system.

Peters said only that the government was responding to "feedback" from the companies, "providing additional flexibility and time to handle technical requests."

Coming at a time when state and federal officials are still working to overcome challenges to the information technology systems necessary to make the exchanges work, some experts say that even a small delay could jeopardize the start of the six-month open enrollment period. REUTERS

Scientists grow "mini human brains" from stem cells

Scientists have grown the first mini human brains in a laboratory and say their success could lead to new levels of understanding about the way brains develop and what goes wrong in disorders.

Researchers started with human stem cells and created a culture in the lab that allowed them to grow into so-called "cerebral organoids" — or mini brains — that consisted of several distinct brain regions.

It is the first time that scientists have managed to replicate the development of brain tissue in three dimensions.

"This study offers the promise of a new tool for understanding the causes of major developmental disorders of the brain," said Paul Matthews, a professor of neuroscience at Imperial College London. REUTERS

Obama, marchers mark 50 years since King gave 'Dream' speech

The dream. Obama said it inspired millions of Americans to fight for a more just society.

America is struggling to fully realize the vision that civil rights leader Martin Luther King described in his famous "I have a dream" speech 50 years ago, as the goal of economic security for all remains elusive, President Barack Obama said on Wednesday.

Obama, the first black U.S. president, spoke to thousands of marchers on Washington's National Mall on Wednesday to commemorate King's landmark address, which came to symbolize the struggle for equality among blacks and whites in America.

"To dismiss the magnitude of this progress, to suggest, as some sometimes do, that little has changed, that dishonors the courage, the sacrifice of those who paid the price to march in those years," Obama said.

"But we would dishonor those heroes as well to suggest that the work of this nation is somehow complete," he said, calling economic justice the "unfinished business" of the civil rights battle.

Marchers, many wearing T-shirts with King's face on them, began their walk near the U.S. Capitol.

They were led by a line of military veterans and people who had been at the 1963 march, their arms linked. People sang "We Shall Overcome" and other civil rights anthems. REUTERS

'Mother of George'

(Sept. 13)

This quiet drama immerses viewers in the cloistered world of African emigres in Crown Heights, Brooklyn — among them a new bride having difficulty bearing a child. It also again proves that cinematographer Bradford Young ("Pariah," "Ain't Them Bodies Saints") is one of the greats.

Movies. Turn your brain back on. It's time for AMPAS bait — and also Robert De Niro with a bat and Metallica in 3-D IMAX.

Vin Diesel returns as his funky-eyed "Pitch Black" anti-hero in "Riddick." / UNIVERSAL PICTURES

Oscar season a-hoy!

'Riddick'

(Sept. 6)
What: Vin Diesel wasn't yet a star when 2000's lean "Pitch Black" came out and was stuck in a valley during the bloated 2004 spin-off "The Chronicles of Riddick." Now that he's back — or at least back in a franchise he once tried to abandon — all's good, presumably.
Why: Series director David Twohy has long been making genre films, and as of "The Perfect Getaway" has finally gotten good at them. That this runs less than two hours is a good sign.
Why not: Sorry, but "Pitch Black" is just so-so. This also features a character named Lord Siberius Vaako.
Will get an Oscar for: Best Animation of the Clearly Tired and Aging Vin Diesel.

'The Family'

(Sept. 13)
What: Eurotrash auteur Luc Besson ("The Fifth Element," "Taken") sucks up Robert De Niro, Michelle Pfeiffer and Tommy Lee Jones into his OTT orbit. The first two play parents in a family hiding from a mob they ratted out.
Why: Say what you will, Besson is probably the last person with significant money making genuinely insane blockbuster product. He may properly rouse the sometimes sleepy De Niro.
Why not: Besson's movies are stupid. Sometimes this isn't a good thing.
Will get an Oscar for: Best Robert De Niro Performance of Fall 2013. (He's also in "Last Vegas," "American Hustle" and "Grudge Match.")

Robert De Niro (with bat) stands up to the mob he snitched on in "The Family." JESSICA FORDE

'Metallica: Through the Never'

(Sept. 27)
What: Remember "The Song Remains the Same," the Led Zeppelin concert movie peppered with each member's ridiculous fantasies? This one marries a Metallica show to a narrative featuring a young man (Dane DeHaan, "The Place Beyond the Pines") going on a "surreal journey" that involves a deadly horseman — in 3-D IMAX!
Why: See "What."
Why not: See "What."
Will get an Oscar for: Best Lasers Behind 50-Something Metalheads

Indie spotlight

'Escape From Tomorrow'

(Oct 11)
Insanely, Disney did not suppress this Sundance craze, furtively shot with cameras snuck into Disney World and then pounded into a fantasy-horror about a man having a Disneyfied breakdown.

'Blue is the Warmest Color'

(Oct. 25)
This year's Palme d'Or winner is luckily being shipped out to American theaters with no cuts — a biggie considering it features a handful of incredibly graphic sex scenes between a teenager (Adele Exarchopoulos) and her 20-something girlfriend (Lea Seydoux). There's also a blistering, epic look at the life of their relationship, so get your mind out of the gutter.

October. Cuaron goes interstellar and Knoxville gets old.

Sandra Bullock and George Clooney go to space in Alfonso Cuaron's "Gravity." / WARNER BROS. PICTURE

'Gravity'

(Oct. 4)
What: Alfonso Cuaron finally follows up 2006's "Children of Men" with this 3-D extravaganza, concerning the plight of two astronauts (George Clooney and Sandra Bullock) — and no one else.
Why: Cuaron and superstar cinematographer Emmanuel Lubezki are visual whizzes who will no doubt do loads with the technology and sensory aspects.
Why not: Sandra Bullock is very talented but not a great straight dramatic actress. Even her Oscar-winning "The Blind Side" role is largely a comic turn.
Will get an Oscar for: Actual Good Use of 3-D

'Captain Phillips'

(Oct. 11)
What: Earlier this year, adventurous audiences got the Danish "A Hijacking," concerning a ship overtaken by Somali pirates. Here's the big-budgeted American edition (albeit not a remake), starring Tom Hanks as real-life abductee Richard Phillips.
Why: Director Paul Greengrass ("The Bourne Ultimatum") is a master at capturing the now with whiplash handheld mega-cutting that's regularly misdiagnosed as being chaotic and unfollowable.
Why not: Greengrass also made "Green Zone," which he struggled in vain to make into more than a groaning history lesson told with 20/20 vision.
Will get an Oscar for: The Most Oscars

'12 Years a Slave'

(Oct. 18)
What: Avant-garde artist Steve McQueen (as opposed to the late superstar) goes big with this adaptation of the memoir of Solomon Northup (played by Chiwetel Ejiofor), a freed slave sold back into slavery.
Why: McQueen is a minimalist who thinks like a maximalist, and both "Hunger" and "Shame" — which, like "Slave," feature Michael Fassbender, and sometimes his penis — boast scores of isolated stunners.
Why not: Both those films faltered to varying degrees when actually addressing the major issues (the Troubles, sex addiction) they ostensibly tackled.
Will get an Oscar for: Best Non-Use of Michael Fassbender's Unclothed Member

'All Is Lost'

(Oct. 18)
What: First comes the two-person "Gravity," then a movie starring only Robert Redford not speaking while he tries to survive while adrift at sea.
Why: Somewhat unexpectedly, this was a major find at this year's Cannes, where it unfortunately played out of competition. Why not: "Margin Call," the last film by director J.C. Chandor, wasn't exactly a visual feast.
Will get an Oscar for: Best Actor, probably

'Jackass Presents: Bad Grandpa'

(Oct. 25)
What: Johnny Knoxville plays a bad grandpa in a loose plot that strings together "Jackass"-y gross-out stunts.
Why: Sue us: "Jackass" is hilarious.
Why not: It's not in 3-D.
Will get an Oscar for: Best Actor, probably

November. Sci-fi by a homophobe and Leo thinks greed is good.

'Ender's Game'

(Nov. 1)
What: Orson Scott Card's classic 1985 novel about kids (Asa Butterfield and Hailee Steinfeld) trained for military battle against aliens finally gets a big-budget adaptation.
Why: The novel is one of sci-fi's brainiest.
Why not: In case you haven't heard, Card is a gigantic homophobe who called for revolution if gay marriage was ever implemented and now thinks people who hate him are being intolerant. But this isn't the first — or gazillionth — time an awful human being has produced good art.
Will get an Oscar for: Most Talented Dedicated Homophobe (sorry, Mel Gibson)

'The Wolf of Wall Street'

(Nov. 15)
What: Martin Scorsese returns to keyed-up, gleefully amoral "Goodfellas" mode, only this time with worse people: stockbrokers (played by Leonardo DiCaprio and Jonah Hill).
Why: If this isn't ridiculously entertaining, then there's no God.
Why not: There's probably no God anyway. But seriously, there's zero chance this isn't a blast. Will get an Oscar for: Best Movie Ever

'The Hunger Games: Catching Fire'

(Nov. 22)
What: Some girl with a weird name that rhymes with "cat piss" (Jennifer Lawrence) continues her adventures outsmarting a dystopian society.
Why: The books are some of the easiest reads in memory. And by easiest, we mean they're poorly written without being distractingly so, a la the works of Dan Brown.
Why not: The "Battle Royale" films do this better, and give you R-rated carnage to boot. But do they feature "futuristic" names like Haymitch Abernathy and Caesar Flickerman?
Will get an Oscar for: Best Terrible Names MATT PRIGGE

The world of "The Hunger Games: Catching Fire" is pretty weird. / MURRAY CLOSE

Indie spotlight

'Mandela: Long Walk to Freedom'

(Nov. 29)
Of the season's many high-profile biopics (see also: "Diana" with Naomi Watts and "Grace of Monaco" with Nicole Kidman), the most noble seems to be this. Idris Elba plays the leader and revolutionary in his younger years.

In December

'The Hobbit: The Desolation of Smaug'

(Dec. 13)
The second attempt to finish a third of a 300-page book aimed at young kids in just under three hours comes at you

'Anchorman 2: The Legend Continues'

(Dec. 18)
Will Ferrell exhumes his longest-lasting creation: self-loving news reader Ron Burgundy, lured into the 24-hour news trend in its infancy.

'Inside Llewyn Davis'

(Dec. 20)
The Coen brothers return again to music and the 1960s, this time focusing on a miserable folk singer (Oscar Isaac) and his adventures making everyone he meets (particularly Carey Mulligan) angry with him.

Cocktail recipe

Sake sangria

"In traditional sangria, sometimes they add brandy. So instead of brandy, which is a stronger flavor, we're adding sake to rosé wine. It doesn't have to be Spanish, but keep it in the sangria realm. It's delicious, refreshing, light and low-alcohol."
— Go to Metro.us for Tsai's full recipe.

TY KU SAKE SANGRIA
PROVIDED

Sake to us!

Grilling. We talk summer eats and sake sangria with TV chef Ming Tsai.

If there's one thing that Boston-based chef Ming Tsai knows well, it's fresh food. Tsai is the executive chef and owner of Blue Ginger, an award-winning Asian fusion restaurant that specializes in fresh catches of the day.

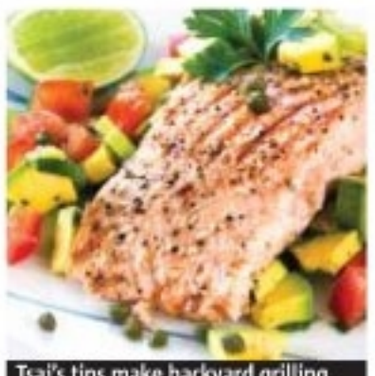
But you may also know Tsai from his hit TV show "Simply Ming," for which he travels the globe, discovering new foods and meeting new chefs. (If you're in Chicago, Tsai insists you try to dine at Grant Achatz's avant-garde restaurant Next.)

When Tsai isn't working on his show or wielding his magic in Blue Ginger's bustling kitchen, you might find him throwing an impromptu end-of-summer barbecue. We gave him a sticky scenario and asked him to whip up a killer yet low-maintenance recipe for us to try at home.

OK, so say we told you that you're in charge of throwing a barbecue — in one hour. What are you going to make?

The prep

"I buy great vegetables — zucchini, eggplant or peppers — whatever's grillable. And I like whole grain so I buy a whole-wheat couscous or quinoa, something that's super easy. I always grab beautiful ears of corn because on the husk is easy; you just throw them on the grill. It has its own insulator and it cooks perfectly; you don't need to boil water and heat up your kitchen. And I'm a big fan of seafood — it's just a lighter way to eat during the summer, so I let the eyes and nose dictate. Ask the guy, 'What's your freshest fish?' — whatever looks and smells the best is the fish I'm going to buy."



Tsai's tips make backyard grilling light and easy. / ISTOCKPHOTO

The recipe

"In a glass or high-edged plate, I add a cup of sake, one to two cups of whatever acid I have — the juice of three lemons, the juice of five limes, vinegar, grapefruit — and then a tablespoon or two of soy sauce, to marinate. Whatever you grill, let it sit in the mixture for two to three minutes maximum. Acid will start cooking [the fish] so the outside will get a little pink and it brings the soy and the sake flavor into the protein. You get a much more nuanced flavor of fish that you can't even pinpoint — but it's so delicious."

She's just being Miley

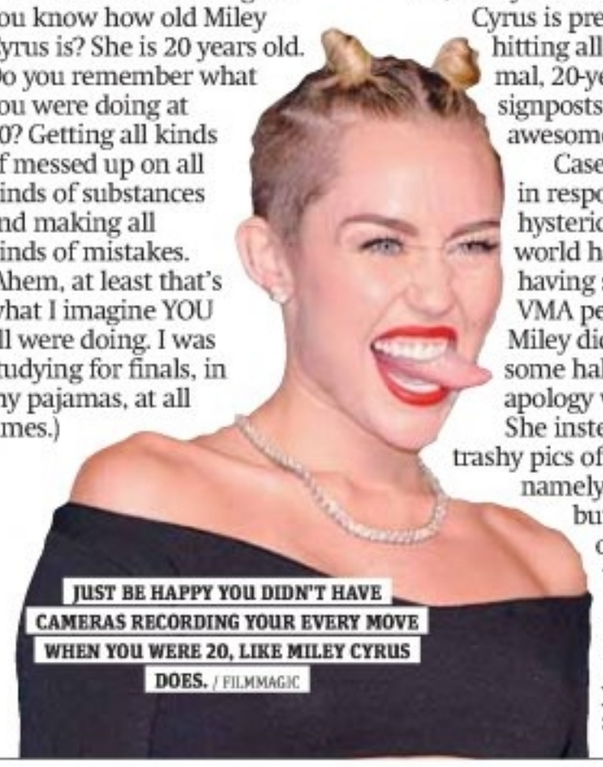
I'm just going to go ahead and say it: Miley Cyrus DGAF and I sort of love her for it. What? The hipster dream sequence/American Apparel-ad on-acid spectacle that was the video for "We Can't Stop" was weird as hell, but it was also sort of amazing.

And here's the thing. Do you know how old Miley Cyrus is? She is 20 years old. Do you remember what you were doing at 20? Getting all kinds of messed up on all kinds of substances and making all kinds of mistakes. (Ahem, at least that's what I imagine YOU all were doing. I was studying for finals, in my pajamas, at all times.)

The difference between 20-year-old Miley Cyrus and 20-year-old you and me is that we didn't have cameras documenting our every move. (Unless you did, in which case — hey, cool, thanks for taking time out of your fancy celebrity life to read this column!)

So, in my estimation, Miley Cyrus is pretty much hitting all the normal, 20-year-old idiot signposts — and awesomely so.

Case and point: in response to the hysterics the entire world has been having since her VMA performance Miley did not issue some half-assed apology via Twitter. She instead tweeted trashy pics of herself — namely her bony butt — by way of issuing the world a big middle finger. Get on with your bad self, Miley.



JUST BE HAPPY YOU DIDN'T HAVE CAMERAS RECORDING YOUR EVERY MOVE WHEN YOU WERE 20, LIKE MILEY CYRUS DOES. / FILMMAGIC

Dorothy Robinson will return Sept. 3.

How do you like dem apples, nerds?

Speaking of everyone making a big stink out of nothing, remember when it was announced that Ben Affleck was going to be Batman and everyone FREAKED THE EFF OUT?

I do. I almost had to cancel my Facebook account, because if I had to read one more rambling diatribe about how Ben Affleck playing Batman was going to speed along global warming or give babies AIDS or whatever it is that people think will happen when this movie star plays a guy in tights, I was going to gouge my eyes out with a rusty spoon.

Because, why so mad, bro? No, really, why are you so angry about this?

Anyway, Matt Damon feels the same and said as much in a The Times of India interview.

"I know there are a lot of people grousing on the Internet. It's Batman!," he said. "That's] certainly within his skill set. Batman just sits there with his cowl over his head and whispers in a kinda gruff voice at people."

I couldn't have said it better so ... I won't.

How Morty and Lee got swept off their feet

Love. The adorable couple from that Swiffer ad share their wisdom with us.

Good news for romantics: Morty and Lee Kaufman are just as in love in real life as they are in the Swiffer ad that made them famous. We spoke to the Kaufmans, who live in Valley Stream, N.Y., about what's kept their bond of 44 years so strong.

How did you two meet?
Lee: I was a widow and so was he, as we found out after we met. His little boy was in my summer reading class and Morty came for a required parent conference.
Morty: I walked in and I said to Lee, "Scotty can't read for beans, what are you gonna do about it?" She wasn't too intimidated. Later on I came in to have another conference with her, and I said, "I didn't come to speak about Scotty — would you care to go out with me?" And from then on it blossomed into a lovely romance.

What drew you together?
Morty: We both had been widowed in our early 40s, and there was a common bond between us [there].
Lee: We never really sat down and figured the points of what was good and what was bad — it really just went along, especially when our children began to get along.
Morty: I'll tell ya, I think an important factor was the fact that our previous marriages were both very satisfactory. We both came in with good concepts of marriage.

What are your secrets for wedded bliss after so many years?
Morty: You have to know that you love the person and you gotta know that person loves you. And you have to be considerate of each other.
Lee: I'm listening very carefully to all this.

How do you resolve arguments?
Morty: You compromise or you give in. No difference of opinion is that important as to interfere with your love for each other. Each one of us gives in more than we'd like. But we give in.
Lee: We were each of us the youngest in our family, and ... when you're the youngest, you learn to accommodate. And we found each other very accommodating. Really, that was a good contributing factor.
Morty: You gotta take care of each other.

For much more of our interview with the Kaufmans, visit www.metro.us. / SWIFFER

Based on the commercial, it looks like Lee does all of the cleaning in the house.
Morty: Oh yes.
Lee: Listen, for somebody who was not a participant — I'll put that politely — in any manner or fashion, I manage. And I have a helper that comes in. But [Morty] is not a good contributor to that.
Morty: You know, she's giving you a misconception. Ask her who does all the laundry. She doesn't know how to work the damn buttons on the washing machine, so I showed her.
Lee: It's true!

How do you keep the sparks flying?
Morty: As you get older, you can just appreciate squeezing each other's hand, hugging each other. There's nothing quite as good as a loving hug and a good, warm kiss.
Lee: Thank you, Morty.
Morty: You're welcome.

What would you say to a person who doesn't think there's anyone good left?

Morty: There are many people out there! You just gotta find the good points in them. Find common ground. Enjoy each other. Enjoy your friends.

Lee: You gotta stay optimistic and make sure that you go places and be with people.

A CREATIVE NEW COCKTAIL HAVEN COMES TO JAMAICA PLAIN

As the people behind any new restaurant can tell you, the ins and outs of the liquor licensing system in this city are a Byzantine conflation of both contemporary bureaucracy and outdated Puritanism. With artificial caps set on the number of licenses available, it can drive the price of purchasing an existing one up to between $300,000 and $450,000. This red tape made things a bit difficult for his concept, says Adam Rutstein, owner of Centre Street Sanctuary, which launched this spring in JP.

"Liquor licenses are priced way out of a restaurant like mine's range," he says. "The Seaport district has gobbled up all the licenses." His is a common refrain.

Instead, for his American bistro, situated in an old rectory in the bustling center of JP (the design repurposes pews, lecterns and stained glass windows from area churches and the bar itself is an old church door), Rutstein bought a wine/beer license, which the neighborhood and city upgraded to a cordials/liqueur license.

Centre Street has found a way to avoid sentencing guests to cocktail purgatory. /ERIN BALDASSARI

What that means is that, in order for his bar to serve a spirit, it has to contain 2.5 percent sugar — regardless of the proof. You'll find plenty of boozy liqueurs here, like Green Chartreuse or absinthes. Even flavored vodkas and spiced rums are allowed. It literally makes no sense.

Nonetheless, a creative bar will work with what they have. In fact, it wasn't until my second cocktail on a recent visit that I realized it wasn't a full bar. Coincidentally, many of the liqueurs that are allowed under such a license happen to be exactly the type featured at your standard cocktail bars — Cynar and other bitter digestifs.

Here the focus is on cocktails with bases of port, Angelica, Amaretto or pisco, as in the Bittersweet Farewell, which also incorporates Cynar, Triple Sec, lemon juice, simple syrup and orange bitters.

It's the type of bittersweet cocktail I'd order anywhere (although here it landed a bit too heavily on the sweet side, like some of their other cocktails).

Sailor Jerry's rum features elsewhere, in both the citrus-y Mug O'grog — with lemon and lime, St. Germaine, peach bitters, orange and grapefruit juice and soda — and the Ward 10 Manhattan — with Punt e Mes, simple, chocolate mole bitters and cherry bitters.

Rounding out the list is a spectrum of sangrias and a fine selection of local and craft beers. It's not quite enough to make you drop to your knees and praise the lord (although the soda bread is close to heavenly), but for beer lovers and cocktail drinkers looking to shake some bad habits, it's a good place to do your penance.

HANSON

Some 16 years after "MMMBop" and some 21 years after forming, the band of brothers have returned.

HANSON ARE SINGING A NEW 'ANTHEM'

On hearing the name Hanson, most people will peppily reply by humming a quick chorus of "MMMBop." But there's more to the band of brothers — Isaac, Taylor and Zac — than long flowing locks and that 1997 hit. A lot's changed since then. They have 10 kids between them, their own label, a beer called Mmmhops and they've sold 16 million albums worldwide.

Tut-tut to those of you who had them down as one-hit wonders. The cherubic trio are celebrating their 21st anniversary as a band with the release of their sixth studio album, "Anthem," which includes trademark soulful pop/rock tracks like "Get the Girl Back."

The band's eldest member, Isaac, discusses the run-up to their six-month world tour, brotherly bickering and the industry's failings.

It's been publicized that the album nearly didn't happen due to disagreements.
We had a different plan for the record — it was much more 2013. The current way of looking at music is just not working for the whole business and nobody is willing to reassess that.

What did you want to do differently?
We wanted to make it an ongoing musical experience but I'll leave it at that. We're hoping that we'll look at that project again in the future.

Who normally incites the arguments?
[Laughs] All of us are perfectly willing to cause trouble. I will say I have a tendency to play devil's advocate quite a lot, so that keeps me in the mix.

What happened during the recording of "Anthem"?
The initial blowout was because we were working on our fan club EP that we release every single year and we had been up really, really late a lot of nights in a row. People were stressed about what was coming and we were working on the song "Tonight" at about 2 a.m. We were frustrated with the process and I said something to Zac, Zac said something to me and so on. It ended with a few fists being thrown and people walking out.

Has your enthusiasm for music waned at all since you first started?
My enthusiasm for music has never waned because I think music is the ultimate expression of fear, joy, sadness and anger — it's a great healer. The music business is messed up. I compare the music business to the whaling industry. The music business is still trying to sell blubber to people who want kerosene.

That's an interesting comparison. What's the blubber and what's the kerosene?
The blubber is, frankly, plastic. The CD itself is not the future; the relationship with the audience is the future. In the process of trying to hold onto plastic, the business has missed the opportunities that are right in front of them to provide future revenue, growth, profitability and sustainability.

And the kerosene?
I'm referring to the music business's one-on-one embracement and partnership with the artist and not necessarily the ownership of the artist. Artists are to blame too. ... Artists in so many cases become very insecure and need handlers to go through life because they allow themselves to perpetuate their own insecurity.

Sip some icy drinks on these last hot nights

See more at www.metro.us

Brrr. Get your fill of slushy summer cocktails before winter's freeze sets in.

Summer has been a bit of cruel mistress this year. With blinding heat waves one minute, apocalyptic thunderstorms the next and at least a few occasions upon which we've had to dig out a sweater from the back of the closet, it hasn't all been partying poolside. But with summer speeding to an end, we'd best saddle up to the bar for a frozen, umbrella-bedecked, tropically boozy vacation in a glass — while we still can.

Nicole Lebedevitch — GM and former head bartender at Kenmore Square's vivacious craft cocktail haunt The Hawthorne — is a passionate devotee of all things blended.

"Our message down here has always been saying 'yes' to anything," she says. "If we have it and we can do it, we're making it."

Armed with a selection of drinks that your inner Copacabana diehard needs to get familiar with (the bright blue Electric Boomerang Banana, for one), Lebedevitch and her team seek to rid the drinking world of the blended-drink-as-chain-restaurant-gimmick or beachfront-booze-of-choice stereotypes. These are serious drinks for not-so-serious drinkers.

"People see that drink go through the room, and they want it," she says. "And it takes just as much thought and energy and decision-making to make a good cocktail in a blender. You want to think about what is going to make all of these flavors come together, and it comes down to using little tricks, like using frozen fruit and cream to bring that flavor and texture."

So not only is it as complex and delicious as any cocktail on the block, it's got plastic monkeys hanging off the rim and a straw the likes of which you coveted intensely as a kid.

Bumps in the road to blended bliss have included everything from the type of ice (crushed ice reigns supreme over standard cold draft ice, which is too dense to break down correctly) to the mixing speed (high speed means smooth texture, low speed means slush), but the triumphs far outweigh the flops. The Miami Vice, for starters, is a stunning pina colada-strawberry daiquiri lovefest in one glass. "Two guilty pleasures in one!" Lebedevitch says with a grin.

"Frozen cocktails are not just a summer thing," she adds. "All cocktails are cold anyway, if you think about it, so why is frozen any different? I want to look into what you can do in the wintertime."

With yet another dreary New England winter on the horizon, we're listening.

Respect the porn stars

Re: 'Pippi porn star' (Metro, Aug. 28) What would a good morning be without a strong shot of espresso and Word columnist Alexandra Cavallo's judgmental moralizing? She writes, "Let's be honest, most people who get ejaculated upon for a living are pretty much dead on the inside." As opposed to those who do so for free? Cavallo owes her job to the (s)exploits of celebs, so a bit less slut-shaming and a bit more compassion and appreciation are in order.

Sharpton's not so sharp

The gathering at the Lincoln Memorial commemorating the 1963 Martin Luther King's "I Have a Dream" speech was a ridiculous spectacle indeed. Led by Al "The Charlatan" Sharpton, this bunch had not much to offer but a grab bag of stale leftist desires and tiresome complaints. I get the impression that we are all supposed to bow our heads in obeisance to whatever idiotic notion comes out of the mouths of these celebrants just because they invoke the name of King. No one with a brain should buy what Sharpton and company is selling.

Marchers are Cape Wind fans

Re: 'Clean air. Six-day, 60-mile energy march set to protest coal plant' (Metro, Aug. 27) Metro's report that Energy Exodus marchers oppose both the Brayton Point coal-fired power plant and Cape Wind would indeed be alarming if they were not false. Marchers are fully in favor of Cape Wind and a clean energy future; the march is a symbolic gesture of our call to move from the toxic fossil fuels of past and current generations to a green and sustainable future. Examining the clutch genes of the Red Sox

MLB. It's what type of hits the Red Sox have ripped late in games that have gotten them to this point.

The Red Sox have had plenty of late-inning dramatics this season, with 11 walk-off wins, the most in the majors. They are also 19-9 in games decided in the last at-bat. Clearly, winning this way requires clutch hits late in games, but are the Red Sox really a clutch-hitting team?

Taking a look at the stats, maybe the Red Sox aren't as clutch as one would think. They are hitting just .232 with an on-base percentage of .326 in late and close situations, which is defined by Baseball Reference as plate appearances in the seventh inning or later with the batting team tied, ahead by one, or the tying run at least on deck.

As a whole, the American League is batting .242 with an OBP of .317 in late and close situations, while all of baseball is hitting .239 with an OBP of .322. Looking at those numbers, the Red Sox are below both the AL and MLB averages. The numbers translate to individual players as well.

No one Red Sox player with more than eight at-bats is hitting over .300 in late and close situations, with the majority of their everyday players hitting in the .250 range, while on-base percentages range just above the MLB average of .322. So, how are the Red Sox winning all these games in walk-off fashion? It comes down to the number of clutch extra-base hits and clutch home runs.

A perfect example is Jonny Gomes, who is hitting .286 in late and close situations with an impressive .456 on-base percentage and an exceptional .592 slugging percentage. Gomes is just 14-for-49 in these situations, but has six doubles and three home runs — nine of his 14 hits have gone for extra-bases.

The Red Sox as a team have 166 total hits in late and close situations, with 62 of them going for extra bases, including 16 home runs. In other words, 37 percent of their hits having been for extra bases. In the American League, 30 percent of hits in late and close situations go for extra bases. Doubles have done the most damage for the Red Sox, as they lead the AL with 45 in the clutch spots. The Sox are also second in the AL in home runs in the ninth inning, with 12, including four walk-offs.

While the overall numbers say the Red Sox are not a very clutch team, when looking deeper into them, it's the types of hits the team gets in clutch situations that has led to the memorable finishes in a number of games this season.
